Industry welcomes Gosford foreshore project

The Urban Development Institute of Australia (UDIA) NSW today welcomed the announcement that the Gosford foreshore project is now zoned in preparation for a long-overdue revitalisation.

UDIA NSW Central Coast Chapter Chair Pauline Wright said the new development could not come soon enough.

“The rezoning will make way for commercial activity and bring more business to the area – something Gosford desperately needs,” she said

“And the housing component will attract more residents to a city that has been dormant for far too long.”

Ms Wright said a development of this scale was also a win for local tradespeople.

“This is positive news for our local tradies, too many of whom travel long distances to work in Sydney or Newcastle,’ she said.

“A transformational project such as this has the ability to ignite more responsible, revitalising developments throughout the Gosford area.”

The Urban Development Institute of Australia NSW is the state’s leading development industry body. It advocates for better planning; timely and affordable housing, and the building vibrant communities to increase local job opportunities.
